Credit Card Policy

If you wish to pay your legal fees and costs online, connect your computer to the Internet, and point your web browser to <https://www.tfkattorneys.com/billpay>. Talley, French & Kendall, P.C. (the "Firm") accepts credit cards on a limited basis through an online service known as PayPal.com ("PayPal"), which is a subsidiary of eBay.com. We cannot accept credit cards except in compliance with the policies of PayPal. We use PayPal for several reasons:

1. Your Privacy. We prefer not to ever have your credit card information. If you pay us online through your own computer, we will never have that information.
2. Your Security. PayPal.com is secure. Data sent over the Internet to PayPal.com is encrypted. PayPal has strict procedures that it follows to avoid credit card fraud.
3. Speed. Credit card transactions are processed immediately. If a credit card transaction is not accepted, you know immediately.
4. Expense. We do not process a lot of credit card payments, and so the cost of a "merchant account" through a bank is excessive for us. PayPal.com does not charge us a monthly fee or equipment fees, making it possible for us to accept credit cards. If it were not for PayPal.com, we would not accept credit cards at all.

For small charges, PayPal does not require that you open an account with them to pay online. Because of PayPal's strict fraud-prevention procedures, there is a limit to what can be charged to your credit card without opening an account with them. If you want to charge more than the limit, you may open an account by following the instructions on the PayPal website (<https://www.paypal.com/us/>).

We reserve the right to change our credit card acceptance policy at any time.
